DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 8-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 8, the phrase "ration of pulling" is unclear. Could it be directed to "ratio of pulling"?

Claim 10 is a duplicate of claim 9.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-4, 7 and 9-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kreckel (5516581 or 5672402).

Kreckel'581 relates to a redetachable device (50), as shown in figures-3A and 3B, comprising a plate (54) with the sides and/or front side having fastening means (52) and the rear side having a strip of double sided adhesive film (56) that is adhesively attached in such a way that the film protrudes beyond the plate as a grip (64). The adhesive film can be released by pulling the film in the direction of the bonding plane, stretching the film (figures 1A, 1B and 1C). Figures 3A and 3B also shows that the rear side of the plate has spacers located laterally alongside the adhesively attached film and that the height of the spacers are less than the thickness of the adhesive for the adhesive to attach to a substrate. The spacers are located along both sides of the film and are formed as segments which extends into the end region. Figure-2 shows that the adhesive can have an intermediate support (32) for the adhesive and the rear side is covered with a release liner (40). The device is used to provide self-adhesive fastening and residue-free redetachment (col. 1, lines 12-14).

Similarly, Kreckel'402 also relates to a redetachable device (50) as shown in figures 3A and 3B having the structure as described above.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kreckel ('581 or '402).

Kreckel'581 or '402, as discussed above, fails to teach that the spacers has a height of 35-90% of the adhesive thickness or that the ratio of pulling-off to tearing load of the film is at least 1:1.5. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to provide Kreckel's plate with the spacer height being 35-90% of the adhesive thickness in order to provide for optimum adhesion to an applying substrate. As for the ratio, it would have been an obvious property of the adhesive film because the film has the same characteristics of being stretchable and redetachable, and the specific ratio would have been obvious based on optimization through routine experimentation to provide stretchability without tearing.
